

IN THE SPECIFICATION:

Please replace the paragraph beginning at page 1, line 10 with the following rewritten paragraph:

--Living in an age with rapid growth of information, people can surf the Internet to browse web sites and access needed information thereby via the connection to a Local Area Network (LAN) using a computer. Therefore, the incorporation of the computer and the Internet has become an indispensable function to ordinary people in their every day life activities. However, the heavy weight, big size and portable unfriendly features of a computer as well as the geologicalgeographical restriction of a LAN are indeed very inconvenient to those users who need to surf the Internet whenever and wherever it is needed. In response to this need, a notebook computer with telecommunication device comes to the fore. Its features of portability and being free of geologicalgeographical restriction allowing the user to surf the Internet and search the web sites for information whenever and wherever it is needed. Its configuration of a conventional notebook computer will be disclosed below.--